

This week we have been

- looking at the work of Casper David Freidrich and thinking about how colour creates emotion to include in our Antarctic paintings.

Look at the different shades of blue you see all around you.
Can you come up with new and expressive names for them?

- reading our topic book Tom Crean's Rabbit. We made predictions about different parts of the story, asked questions and clarified unfamiliar words.

Can you clarify the following words: unravel, mutton, perched, utterly
Can you find out what Terra Nova means?

- identifying noun phrases in the text and writing some of our own to describe settings in the book.

Write some sentences using noun phrases from the story:
glittering snow, spiky mountain, crowded cabin, fat silvery seals.

- learning the 2, 5 and 10 times tables by drawing pictures, telling simple maths stories and solving word problems.

Write a sensible story for the calculation:

$$6 \times 10$$

Draw an image to illustrate your story.

A possible story could be:

There were six tables with ten people on each table – how many people altogether?

OR

There were six purses with 10p in each purse – how much money altogether?
