This week in Reception

We continue with our learning about the artist, Jadé, this week creating three abstract class identity panels. It has been interesting to see how the classes see themselves, what they choose to include, how they represent ideas and how different from each other, the classes have made their contributions.

All classes have continued to prioritise the children's kindness and encouraged empathy towards each other. We have all felt the benefits of this and are (largely) delighted with the children's behaviour this week.

The number 20 has inspired lots of amazing maths of all sorts that has often been totally inspired by the children's own interests. They are getting so good at explaining what they did to reach an answer and are very mature at finding ways to extend their learning by looking for patterns.

Next Week

More of the same in maths - still so much we can practice with number 20. Weighing scales and cooking are on the agenda, which will be very popular. The cooking will link to Jade's work- you will have to wait and see how.

Our class panels still need work so that will take up our indoor day's time... and maybe outdoor too, weather dependent.

Please keep the small bits of recycling coming in for our junk modelling.

Phonics

Philippa's group

We have played some online handwriting games and some whole class turn taking loop games as well as making a treasure hunt game. The children were really good at their clue writing, which really helped the person doing the hunting.

Bethan's group

We have been reading and writing polysyllabic words. We played a loop card game to practice high frequency words and made our own phonics games. We finished the week with phonics Bingo.

Ashleigh's group

We continue to practise the previously taught sounds in fun ways. Additionally, we are focusing on letter formation and trying to break some habits. In particular, we practise the c shape letters, forming them in an anticlockwise direction (a, c d, e, q g and o). We have become cheerleaders to robot talk longer words, which is challenging. We have used toys and pictures to write captions about our favourite TV shows. Additionally, we have made our own Bingo sheets and used them today to play a game.

Katrina's group

We practised reading and writing words with 'ai' and 'ee' digraphs. The children have been taking the teacher role and showing the rest of the group how to write the sounds using the big whiteboard.

Waitrose hamper online auction

This is all set for you to bid via reception@kilmore.lewisham.sch.uk. Please send in what you would be willing to offer for this delightful summer picnic in the park themed hamper. All proceeds go to our outdoor area project.
